

Diabetic Foot Callus

This patient has a high plantar arch deformity that has resulted in pressure points and callus formation over the heels, metatarsal heads, and along the medial aspect of the great toe. Extensive callus increases the subcutaneous pressure immediately beneath the callus and can result in a subcutaneous hemorrhage, the "pre-ulcer."