

Dactylitis

Dactylitis is characterized by symmetrical (usually) swelling of the hand and feet digits associated with redness and low grade fever. In sickle cell disease, it most commonly occurs in children age less than 5 years. This image is from an adult with reactive arthritis producing similar changes of the toe digits.