

Superficial basal cell carcinoma

Superficial basal cell carcinoma typically presents as a well-defined erythematous scaling plaque or papule with a thin pearly border. The lesion may be atrophic in the center and usually is rimmed with fine translucent micropapules.