

Normal Flow Volume Loop

Flow volume loops plot flow (liters/second) as a function of volume. In the normal flow volume loop, after the peak flow has been achieved, the flow rate declines linearly, in proportion to volume producing, a relative steep and straight slope.