

Clubbing

The angle between the nail bed and the long axis of the finger is normally >15 degrees elevation. Patients with a lesser angle have clubbing. The angles on this patient's fingers are horizontal or demonstrate depression. Clubbing is associated with cyanotic heart disease, chronic pulmonary disease, and malignancy.