PRESENTERS

Amy Holbrook, MD, FACP is an Associate Program Director at the Abbott Northwestern Internal Medicine Residency Program in Minneapolis, MN. She is also an Adjunct Professor for the University of Minnesota and serves as the Site Director for the Internal Medicine Clerkship and Acting Internships. Her clinical practice includes both inpatient and outpatient internal medicine. She is the current Chair of the American College of Physicians Council of Early Career Physicians. Her professional interests include student and resident education, physician wellness, and financial planning for early career physicians.

Megan Hiles, MD, MBA, FACP pursued her undergraduate degree in Biology at The Colorado College. She received her medical degree from Pennsylvania State University and completed her residency in Internal Medicine with an emphasis in primary care at the University of Colorado. She has held faculty appointments teaching medical students and residents at the University of Colorado, University of Hawaii and University of Kansas. She currently serves on multiple national committees for the American College of Physicians.

Kara Pepper, MD is a practicing primary care Internist and executive coach in Atlanta, GA. After 14 years in private practice, Dr. Pepper built her own 17-state telemedicine practice for adults across the southeast, especially those with eating disorders. In addition to her clinical practice, she provides executive coaching and is the founder of Micropractice Mastermind, a community for physicians transforming healthcare through solo practice. Dr. Pepper is the podcast host of "It's Not Just You," stories of survival, humanism, and career sustainability.
