

American College of Physicians
GLOBAL AMBASSADORS PROGRAM

The goal of the ACP Global Ambassador Program is to further the mission of the ACP globally by sending a distinguished FACP or MACP to represent the ACP and speak at in-person or virtual internal medicine meetings organized by ACP international chapters or at a limited number of national medical or internal medicine societies outside the U.S. per the guidelines established by the ACP.

Applications for this program must be submitted online via the link listed below.

This program allows for a rich exchange between the Ambassador and local leaders or conference organizers and participants. It also provides an opportunity to broaden ACP's outreach and contribute to the exchange of medical knowledge among nations.

Before completing the application, please read the program Guidelines below:

1. The planned conference should have the support, backing, or involvement of the chapter and/or host society. The physician audience should be diverse with respect to local affiliations and institutions.
2. The chapter governor or conference chair may request a specific Ambassador. If a specific speaker is not requested, ACP will select an ambassador if the application is approved. Ambassadors must have ACP Fellowship or Mastership. ACP Global Engagement within the Chapter Activities Department will make the final decision on the assignment of speakers.
3. The conference host may be asked to distribute ACP promotional materials and/or provide the Ambassador with additional time to speak briefly on ACP benefits, programs, and services during the meeting.
4. The Ambassador shall be given an opportunity to make at least two presentations within the broad field of internal medicine for in-person meetings. Presentations should have significant relevance to the audience's practice of internal medicine.
