Georgia task force on healthcare recommends more research

[READ MORE]

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

A high-powered task force led by Lt. Gov. Casey Cagle has completed nearly a year of meetings and research without producing a solution to some of the state’s biggest healthcare problems, such as the state’s hundreds of thousands of uninsured poor. Instead, it recommended more research. The Senate Health Care Reform Task Force’s steps may eventually lead to big solutions. It recommended the formation of two groups... to research the state’s healthcare needs, form a strategic plan and make their own recommendations.

Georgians will see the impact of Amazon healthcare pact — eventually
The Atlanta Journal-Constitution
Factory workers for Georgia-based Mohawk Industries can go to health clinics the company runs onsite. The Kaiser Permanente HMO healthcare model started when the shipbuilding company branched out to offer healthcare to its employees. When news broke recently that Amazon, J.P. Morgan and Berkshire Hathaway were joining forces to lower their healthcare costs, it was a bombshell for the health industry. But it wasn’t new.
