Midterm election boosts Medicaid expansion, but challenges remain

Kaiser Health News
Medicaid — which has been a political football between Washington and state capitols during the past decade — scored big in the recent election. Following the vote, nearly 500,000 uninsured adults in five states are poised to gain Medicaid coverage under the Affordable Care Act, advocates estimate. Three deep-red states passed ballot measures expanding their programs and two other states elected governors who have said they will accept expansion bills from their legislatures. READ MORE

Why telehealth should focus on population health, treatment plan adherence as the model evolves

Healthcare Finance
Telehealth should stop thinking of itself as telehealth. The care model, which harnesses technology to provide remote care via video conferencing and other means, is proving to be more and more effective, especially in rural areas that lack brick-and-mortar care options. Elderly patients often find it useful since it eliminates the need for transportation. READ MORE

AMA mapping tool identifies where workforce needs are greatest

AMA
A customizable, AMA data-visualization tool that has been used to locate physician shortage areas and allocate resources is now mobile-friendly and has more publicly accessible data to facilitate research or guide public health decisions. The AMA Health Workforce Mapper has been used by physicians and medical residents to help them decide where they are needed most. The tool can also be used by researchers, journalists, legislators, policymakers and others to better understand trends and identify gaps in patient access to care. READ MORE
