INDUSTRY NEWS

Health care in Georgia would look very different if bills pass Legislature

ACP
This could be the General Assembly session that rocks Georgia health care. Between the regulatory reform measures already introduced, and the coming bill on federal “waivers,” lawmakers have a chance to reconfigure the medical landscape in the state. The waiver proposal from Gov. Brian Kemp is expected to be twofold. One proposal, if approved by the feds, would likely extend coverage to more uninsured Georgians through Medicaid. The other would shore up the health insurance exchange under the Affordable Care Act. READ MORE

Gwinnett Medical, Northside say they have final clearance for merger

ACP
Northside Hospital and Gwinnett Health System have cleared their final regulatory hurdle and plan to combine operations later this year, officials said.

The merger of the two metro Atlanta health care powerhouses has been years in the making. A combined system would include five hospitals, adding Gwinnett's Lawrenceville and Duluth facilities to Northside's hospitals in Sandy Springs, Cumming and Canton. It would also have more than 250 outpatient facilities. READ MORE
