A Medical Student Reflection on the Georgia ACP Day at the Capitol

Georgia’s gold domed capital is a familiar fixture of Atlanta’s downtown skyline. I drive by it most days on my way to work at Grady Memorial Hospital, the city’s safety net healthcare facility and the reason I decided to train at Emory University School of Medicine. Within the shadow of that gleaming dome, I practice seeing and hearing what many people choose to ignore; I treat the physical assaults of homelessness and manage chronic diseases exacerbated by poor nutrition, poor health literacy and inadequate access to care.

MGMA: Majority of practices say cost of care outweighs Medicare reimbursements

According to recent MGMA Stat Poll, healthcare organizations are struggling with the ever-widening gap between reimbursements and cost of care. Participants were asked whether their practices 2019 Medicare payment rates were above, equal to or below the cost of delivering care. More than two-thirds of medical practices reported that 2019 Medicare payments will not cover the cost of delivering care to beneficiaries.
