The state Department of Community Health will reinstate the Medicaid benefits of 17,000 poor elderly or disabled people it cut off in a mass disenrollment this month. State officials still believe they properly notified most of those people it was time to renew, and that those beneficiaries simply did not respond. But out of "an abundance of caution" they will restart the process, said Blake Fulenwider, the agency's chief health policy officer. READ MORE

Physician outrage over CVS' new diabetic testing policy

Self-monitoring of blood glucose is an essential part of managing diabetes. It is both a necessary practice for those who adjust their insulin based on their glucose levels and an educational tool for patients who want to know what happens if/when they eat three slices of pizza instead of a salad for dinner.
