Program Description:

Physician Contract Review by Denny Maher MD, JD
Entering into practice is an exciting time. However, before committing to an employment relationship, ensure you understand all of the terms of your contract. Employment contracts are legal documents that often contain unfamiliar terms and conditions. It is vitally important for your contract to clearly reflect your understanding of what you must do in your practice as well as the obligations and rights of your future employer. This presentation will include general information on what to look for before signing an employment contract:

• Basic information about contracts
• Compensation, bonus, malpractice, and tail coverage
• Physician & employer rights and responsibilities
• Contract elements such as non-compete and non-solicitation provisions, indemnification/hold harmless and other things such as work hours, on-call obligations, and office and staff support.

Wealth-Building Tips for Young Physicians by Viral Shah MD, CFP®, EA
Dr. Viral Shah is a practicing physician as MultiCare Inpatient Specialists. He is the recipient of American College of Physician’s “Top 10 Hospitalist” award in 2012. His personal life experiences inspired him to pursue and obtain the designation of Certified Financial Planner™. Dr. Shah has given financial planning talks at the annual meetings of Washington State Medical Association and American College of Physicians WA Chapter. He has a particular interest in helping young physicians avoid the financial pitfalls that he faced in the early days of his medical career. This talk will include general information on:

• What is wealth and how does one amass wealth
• Investment strategies that work (or don't work)
• How to find a financial planner/advisor

CME: Physicians attending this Continuing Medical Education activity may claim TWO credits of Category I to meet the CME requirements of the Washington State Medical Quality Assurance Commission for renewal of licensure.
