

HEATHER SATEIA, MD, FACP

Dr. Heather Sateia is an assistant professor of medicine at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. Her areas of clinical expertise include preventive medicine, primary care, and ambulatory clinical operations.

Dr. Sateia received her B.A. from Princeton University. She earned her M.D. from Dartmouth Medical School. She completed her residency and chief residency in internal medicine at Barnes-Jewish Hospital, Washington University in St. Louis, MO.

She joined the Division of General Internal Medicine at Johns Hopkins in 2013 as a clinician-educator. She is an Associate Program Director with the Osler Medical Training Program and is the Clinical Director of Hopkins General Internal Medicine at Green Spring Station. In 2020, she was inducted into the prestigious Miller Coulson Academy of Clinical Excellence. Within ACP, she has served at a national level on the Academic Advisory Board. Regionally, she is a member of the Council, Membership Committee Co-Chair and served on the Restructure Committee.