The Affordable Care Act (ACA) By The Numbers

- Combined, up to 12 million Americans have signed up or deemed eligible for ACA coverage through the exchanges, Medicaid, or young adults on their parents’ plans as of January 31, 2014.

- 80 percent of Americans are mostly unaffected by the ACA’s benefit requirements because they get to keep coverage from a large employer that already meets the law’s standards.

- 14 percent of currently uninsured Americans will gain access to an affordable policy.

- 13 million low-income uninsured Americans will get covered under Medicaid/CHIP, according to a May 2013 Congressional Budget Office estimate, online.

- 5 million younger persons have incomes that will make them eligible for Medicaid if their state is participating in the ACA’s Medicaid expansion.

- 9 out of 10 younger people who are not insured by a large employer will qualify for ACA’s premium subsidies.
