Fostering Excellence in Internal Medicine
This live activity has been designated for 7.5 CME credits and up to 27.5 CME credits.
Meeting Highlights

• Two SEP modules
• Doctor’s Dilemma®
• Updates in Pulmonary Medicine, Hospital Medicine, and Women’s Cardiovascular Disease
• Special Presentation by ACP Senior Vice-President for Governmental Affairs and Public Policy, Bob Doherty
• Resident and Medical Student Poster Competition

Dear Colleague,

Join me and your colleagues in internal medicine at the next scientific meeting of the Kentucky Chapter of the American College of Physicians, being held Friday, September 29, 2017, at the University of Louisville Event and Conference Service Center at Shelby Campus in Louisville.

The meeting is a great way for you to recharge, rewind, and reflect with your peers, chapter leaders, and great speakers. Connect with the Kentucky Chapter’s rich source of knowledge content and networking by attending our premier meeting for general internists, subspecialty internists, hospitalists, allied health practitioners, residents, and medical students.

In addition to earning CME credits, this conference is about making personal contacts and getting involved in your chapter. You’ll engage with people who know your challenges and can help you find solutions. The opportunities available at this meeting will help you meet not only your needs as a physician but also the needs of the patients you serve.

To ensure your place at this invaluable meeting, register now by visiting us online at kychapter.acponline.org.

I look forward to seeing you in Louisville.

Sincerely,

Philip F. Bressoud, MD, FACP
ACP Governor, Kentucky Chapter

Ryan Hurt, MD, PhD, FACP, is an Assistant Professor of Medicine at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, MN. He completed his undergraduate degree at Hamline University followed by a Master’s in biology at Murray State University in Kentucky. He subsequently completed his MD and PhD at the University of Louisville (UofL) followed by internal medicine residency and chief residency at UofL. His major areas of interest, both clinically and in research, are nutrition, obesity, smoking cessation, and addiction medicine. He is currently the director of the Home Parenteral and Enteral nutritional program at the Mayo Clinic. In addition, he continues to teach residents and students and has won numerous teaching awards. He also has several grants to study smoking cessation strategies as well as nutrition in the obese and has been invited to lecture both nationally and internationally.

Christopher Simmons, MD, PhD, completed both his MD and PhD training at the University of Kentucky College of Medicine. He went on to complete a combined residency in Internal Medicine and Pediatrics and will be staying on as the Chief Resident for the Department of Pediatrics in 2017–2018. During his residency training he earned a Certificate in Medical Education and has interests in clinical reasoning, physician leadership skills, palliative care, and physician burnout. He is currently working to revise standards regarding feedback to resident physicians to include assessment of their well-being as well as demonstrated elements of joy in clinical practice. Additional projects he is involved in include curricula on Leading From Where You Stand and Direct Observation at the Bedside. He is the creator and moderator of Burnproof.org, an online platform designed to disseminate curricular and quality improvement proposals as well as FOAMed materials, including lectures and curated links from around the Web.

Elizabeth Riley, MD, FAAP, FACP, oversees all multidisciplinary cancer clinics at the University of Louisville (UofL). She has clinical expertise in breast medical oncology and served as Director of that program from 2011–2013. She is also an Associate Professor of Medicine and the Associate Division Director for the Medical Hematology/Oncology Division at the James Graham Brown Cancer Center at the UofL. In 2011, she became an Elected Fellow of the American College of Physicians. Dr. Riley has more than 9 years of experience conducting clinical trials on cancer and interacting with collaborators in the design and implementation of transdisciplinary studies. Her original work most notably includes improving compliance to oral anti-estrogens, improving screening rates, and utilization of mobile mammography. In addition, she has served on the ASCO Health Disparities Advisory Group, which involves improving awareness among the oncology community as well as addressing policy and advocacy for health disparities on a regional and national level.

Jesse Roman, MD, is Professor of Medicine and Pharmacology/Toxicology, Chair of the Department of Medicine, Chief of Medical Service of University of Louisville Hospital, and Distinguished University Scholar at the University of Louisville (UofL) Health Sciences Center. He received his MD from the University of Puerto Rico School of Medicine in 1983. After undergoing training in Internal Medicine at the San Juan VA Medical Center, he joined the Pulmonary & Critical Care Medicine Fellowship Program at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, Missouri. In 1991, Dr. Roman joined the faculty at Emory University as Assistant Professor of Medicine, and in 2009 joined the UofL. He is board-certified in Internal Medicine and Pulmonary Medicine. Dr. Roman served as Pulmonary Section Chief at the Atlanta VA from 1994–2000 and as Associate Division Director from 1997–2001. He became Director of the Emory Division of Pulmonary, Allergy and Critical Care Medicine in 2003. He was also the co-founder and Director for Research of the Emory Interstitial Lung Diseases Program. In 2007, Dr. Roman was named AVP and Founding Director of the Emory Center for Respiratory Health. In 2009, Dr. Roman became Professor and Chairman of the Department of Medicine at the UofL. Dr. Roman has written extensively in the area of lung tissue remodeling and inflammation and the role of extracellular matrices in the control of cellular functions, with over 200 original papers, book chapters, and review articles. His research has been continuously funded by federal and nonfederal organizations, including the National Institutes of Health, Department of Veterans Affairs, Department of Defense, private foundations, and industry. He has held permanent and ad hoc memberships in several VA, National Institutes of Health, and private foundation study sections. Dr. Roman served as Past Chair of the Data Safety and Monitoring Board Assembly and the Scientific Advisory Committee of the American Thoracic Society, and is currently Chair of its Health Equality Committee. He also served as Past President of the Southern Society for Clinical Investigation and is on the board of the American Lung Association–Midland States, the Association of Professors of Medicine, and the Pulmonary Fibrosis Foundation.

Adam Gray, MD, attended the University of Kentucky for undergraduate studies. He received his medical degree from Ross University School of Medicine in Edison, NJ. Dr. Gray then completed residency training and chief residency training at the University of Kentucky. He stayed on as faculty and is a hospitalist at both the University of Kentucky and the VA. In addition to patient care, he enjoys teaching. He is the director for the internal medicine and acting internship clerkship and leads the internal medicine resident board review.
Gretchen Wells, MD, PhD, is the Thomas Whayne Professor of Women's Heart Health at the Gill Heart Institute at the University of Kentucky. She holds an MD and PhD from the University of Alabama School of Medicine in Birmingham, AL. Prior to coming to Kentucky, she was Professor of Internal Medicine/Cardiology at Wake Forest School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, where she also served as Dean of Admissions. She is a 2011 Hedwig von Ameringen ELAM fellow.

Robert Doherty is the Senior Vice President of Governmental Affairs and Public Policy for the American College of Physicians (ACP), the largest physician specialty society and second largest medical organization in the United States. ACP represents 148,000 internal medicine physicians and medical student members. Mr. Doherty has more than 37 years of health policy experience and is an accomplished presenter at health conferences. From 1979 to 1998, Mr. Doherty worked in the governmental affairs department of the American Society of Internal Medicine and, with the merger of ASIM and ACP in June 1998, joined the ACP as Senior Vice President for Governmental Affairs and Public Policy. He has senior staff management responsibilities for ACP’s Division of Governmental Affairs and Public Policy, located in Washington, DC. Mr. Doherty has authored or co-authored many policy-related papers for the Annals of Internal Medicine, ACP’s flagship peer-reviewed journal. He also writes and hosts The ACP Advocate Blog, which won the 2009 Best Health Policy/Ethics Blog in an award program sponsored by Epocrates. Mr. Doherty serves on the Board of Trustees of URAC, a leading health care accreditation organization and on the Steering Committee for Stand For Quality. He is also a past-chair of the Policy Steering Committee for the e-Health Initiative. Mr. Doherty is a magna cum laude graduate of The American University in Washington, DC with a degree in political science.

Philip F. Bressoud, MD, FACP, is an Associate Professor of Medicine at the University of Louisville (UofL) School of Medicine and is the current Governor of the Kentucky Chapter of the American College of Physicians. Dr. Bressoud received his medical degree in 1989 and completed his residency in internal medicine at the UofL. He served as Chief Medical Resident at UofL prior to joining the faculty in 1994. Dr. Bressoud is board-certified in internal medicine and certified in clinical informatics. He is the lead physician for the UofL Physicians electronic medical records project and serves on the Allscripts TouchWorks national Physician Advisory Board. His clinical expertise is in adult primary care and is the executive director for Campus Health Services for the UofL.
